Long Island Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Roundtable

Area Council (LIAC)

PRACTICE

The Long Island Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Roundtable brings UUs together to promote social justice in the region. Long Island struggles with many critical issues, such as immigrant rights, racial justice, education equity, affordable housing, and environmental racism. However, challenges of hyper-localism, lack of communal identity, a geography and congestion that makes transportation lengthy and difficult, and a tendency to operate in silos, make it difficult to build a unified social justice strategy.

To advance social justice on Long Island and advocate for the worth and dignity of every being, and justice, equity and compassion in our dealings with each other, the Roundtable promotes:

Staying informed on social justice issues taking place locally and nationally through a dedication to gathering accurate information from diverse sources

Taking a stand against oppressive policies or practices after engaging in a strategic, collaborative process with allies and with input from those most affected

Identifying and challenging white supremacy, racism, misogyny, transphobia, and homophobia both within our own congregations and in the larger world

JOIN US!

PURPOSE

The Long Island Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Roundtable provides a space to:

- bring congregations together to communicate and collaborate
- link with nonprofits fighting for social justice
- strategize with other progressive faith allies
- develop and share tools to strengthen the voice of UUism to promote social justice on Long Island.
